FR. BOB'S WEEKLY BLOG

When St. Augustine was asked what the three most important virtues are, he responded by saying, "Humility, humility, humility."

How did Augustine arrive at such wisdom? Personal experience, for sure. In his youth, he was, shall we say, quite full of himself. Over the course of time, however, and by way of conversion, he would learn God is God and he was not God, and that he didn't have all the answers to life's big questions. He learned to allow for mystery.

Humility is the antidote for pride. Pride arrogantly declares, "I am a god. I decide what's right and wrong. I am the center of the universe." Humility helps us put things in proper perspective so that we realize God is God and we are not.

Far too many folks still view humility as weakness. They tend to think humility means becoming a door mat for other people to take advantage of in certain situations, and in a competitive culture the last thing we want to be seen as is weak. Humility is NOT weakness.

In spiritual reality, however, humility is a virtue; a strength. Pride says, "I don't need God. I don't need others." Humility says, "I need God. I need others." Think about it. Would you rather live in a world filled with humble people? Or a world filled with pride and arrogance?

Our first reading this Sunday from Sirach says, "My child, conduct your affairs with humility." This is good advice but advice our current culture struggles to see as wise. Humility doesn't fit well in an individualistic, me-first, competitive society; in a dog-eat-dog market where – in order for you to win -- someone must lose.

Conversion of mind and heart turns things upside down. We begin to see the world differently through the lens of humility. The pride of ME can become the grace of WE. This happens not on our own power but with the help of grace; both actual grace and sanctifying grace. The problem is far too many people pridefully think they don't need God's grace. News flash. We need grace, and we certainly need grace to continue maturing in discipleship.

Finally, the Blessed Mother, Mary, models for us humility. She teaches us how to say YES to God's will; to forgo what might have been our plans so we can embrace more fully what God desires to do in us and through us for the sake of the kingdom.

Embracing humility is going to be a challenge when we're living in a "What's in it for me," culture," that wants us to hop on the me-first train. Mary helps us stay humble and God-centered as WE do our part to cooperate with grace and build the kingdom of heaven on earth.

Like a Good Neighbor

As a parish in the Clearing community, we do our best to be good neighbors. We try to be mindful of how what we're doing affects our immediate neighbors. Please join me in always being mindful of this neighborhood relationship. All our parish groups and organization are called to be "good neighbors." People coming to and from Mass are also called to be "good neighbors."

Unfortunately, despite our best attempts, we do on occasion hear complaints/criticisms from some of our neighbors who live by either of our two campuses. Some of the input is reasonable and valid. Some of the input is unreasonable and more along the lines of complaining that the two church properties even exist.

This reminds me of a quick random conversation I had one day with a guy who said it would be better if we sold off our properties and more homes got built in the neighborhood. I couldn't comprehend his message and asked him to explain. He said, "More property tax revenue."

I didn't know what to say on the spot. In hindsight, it makes me sad.

Our mission continues – the salvation of souls and the sanctification of the people. That's why we're here. We proclaim the good news. We celebrate the Eucharist. We educate and form our children, and we serve those in need. This is our spiritual home, and our doors are open.

Quote -- "The most powerful weapon to conquer the devil is humility." --
St. Vincent de Paul

FR. KEVIN'S GREGORIAN RANTS

Reform and renewal of the Holy Mass was not the only aim of Sacrosanctum Concilium. While Mass is the primary and most important liturgy, renewal of the other sacraments, sacramentals and devotions, sacred art and music, the liturgical calendar, and the Liturgy of the Hours was addressed by Vatican II. This was to show to the faithful and the world the richness of the Church's rites and traditions that open up the divine world to humanity.

The fathers wanted to remind the faithful that the sacraments are meant to teach and to sanctify: "The purpose of the sacraments is to sanctify men, to build up the body of Christ, and, finally, to give worship to God; because they are signs, they also instruct. They not only presuppose faith, but by words and objects they also nourish, strengthen, and express it; that is why they are called 'sacraments of faith.' They do indeed impart grace, but, in addition, the very act of celebrating them most effectively disposes the faithful to receive this grace in a fruitful manner, to worship God duly, and to practice charity" (SC59).

When the sacraments and other blessings are clear and celebrated well, there is a great fullness to them. So, it's best that the faithful understand the sacraments not only through verbal instruction, but through the rites themselves. The signs, symbols, and actions are never trivial or empty of meaning.

Sacramentals are signs, typically items and actions, given to us by the Church that helps us open our hearts to receive God's grace and grow in holiness. They are not the sacramentals themselves, so they don't impart salvific grace, but prepare us to receive it and help it grow in our life. Examples of these are blessings of homes, meals, or religious objects, holy water, crucifixes, rosaries, and palm branches from Holy Week. We employ them in ordinary moments of life to remind us of and usher in God's presence.

Like the Mass, the revisions to the other sacraments proposed by Sacrosanctum Concilium were meant to simplify and clarify the rites in order to foster participation and understanding. Along with a wider use of the vernacular tongue, the rites of initiation were revised to more closely match the steps of the early Church. This meant bringing back the catechumenate for adults who had never been baptized, providing them clear steps and rites for instruction and purification.

The baptismal rite for infants and children was also revised to more deeply engage the parents and godparents, as the children themselves aren't yet able to understand. Options were to be provided for different scenarios, such as large groups of children or the full rites for babies who had been baptized in emergencies. The rites and formulas for confirmation, marriage, and penance were also revised to "more clearly express both the nature and effect of the sacrament." Greater emphasis was placed on communal celebration wherever possible.

Another major renewal was to the sacrament of Anointing of the Sick. An understanding had developed, and still continues in many places today, that the sacrament was called "Last Rites" and could only be administered to a person who was near death. While this aspect of the sacrament remains and is encouraged, one can receive this for surgeries, health scares, mental health, or other illnesses. The council asked that a continuous rite for confession, anointing, and Viaticum (receiving communion for the final time as food for the journey to heaven) be provided to give a full rite for someone at the end of their life on earth.

Again, the sacramental revisions did not indicate that something wrong or corrupted was being done. Rather, they were to distinctly affirm that the sacraments were instituted by Christ and entrusted to the Church as essential means of sanctification and signs of faith. The rites of the sacraments should be carried out in as clear and pastoral fashion as possible, being well-adapted to the needs of the faithful, while remaining faithful to tradition. If we can't get the rites right, our lives as Christians becomes exponentially harder because we our access to truth, beauty, and goodness essentially vanishes.
